

Dear friends,

From the very first day in the Novitiate my eyes were drawn to the Globe in our study hall. A Globe we find in every community of ours. Every time I passed by it a desire would arise in me to go to one place or another and see how the Salesian charism had set up its tent there. How many times did I not look at those parts of our beautiful planet where the grey colour on the globe indicated that we were not present there. There too, in those very places, young people, especially the poorest, are calling out to us.

Mission is part of our identity as Christians, and it is as a community of believers that we can together be signs of the Father's all-providing love for all people of good will. The joy, enthusiasm and initiative of Don Bosco truly moves us to a renewed missionary commitment..

Bioethical challenges through the eyes of a Salesian

At the end of each of his speeches, Pope Francis insistently says: "Don't forget to pray for me!". When the Holy Father asks us to pray for him, it is not a mere figure of speech. He feels on his shoulders the weight of decisions that affect, above all, the faith and morals of believers. They find in his words a sure way of facing hitherto unknown challenges, including in bioethics.

Almost thirty years ago, John Paul II established the Pontifical Academy for Life to which he entrusted the delicate task of studying how to promote and defend human life in order to develop a culture of life. The members of the Academy are scientists from all over the world, who put their professionalism at the service of the dignity of every single human being, no one excluded, no one 'discarded' at any stage of his or her life.

And what are the latest projects you are working on?

In addition to the 'classic' challenges concerning the beginning and end of life (e.g. Human Genome Editing and Palliative care), there are the 'new' ones brought about by the progress of technology: algor-ethics, which seeks to give a human imprint to artificial intelligence that is seeing exponential progress never before seen in history; robo-ethics, which looks at how humans and machines can work together, not against each other, to improve the quality of life and to combat disease, ignorance and poverty. Finally, the major challenge of global bioethics is to reflect together on major issues by offering cultural and religious input.

These are some of the most recent bioethical challenges that the Church helps us to face with joy and hope. She does not want to replace our conscience, nor our reason but, as Mother and Teacher, she wants only the good of her children; that they do not live in error. Perhaps our Salesian mission is also this: to pray for the Pope, study his Magisterium and form young people to the culture of life..

- How can I favor a culture of life in the environment in which I live?

WELL-COORDINATED SALESIAN DEVELOPMENT- WORK

Dear Fonny, you are working as the coordinator of DBN. What for do we need this network in today's world full of many other interesting networks?

Don Bosco Network is an international network of nine Salesian Ngo's and Mission Offices which work in the field of develop cooperation. We believe in the benefit of exchange of information and good practices among our members and with related Salesian institutes. We support capacity building of Planning and Development Offices, and are active in the field of advocacy and development education. Coordinated effort makes development work much more efficient; it makes the Salesian work more recognizable and we are able to work on common issues and topics in a coordinated way.

What do you think is the most important contribution of DBN to the Salesian missions?

Our biggest contribution to the Salesian Mission Sector is our practical and coordinated assistance in case of global emergencies. For example, during the first Covid-19 year, there was a call from the Rector Major for global solidarity. DBN assisted in the coordination of this Emergency Response by offering its platform, human resources and communication tools to make all work more transparent and have all info more centralized.

This month we pray for the young in Belgium. What can we – Salesians and the entire Salesian movement – bring to these young people to help them live their lives in an authentic and responsible way?

In these times when many young people do not feel well about themselves, are vulnerable because they lack self-confidence, and are in need of acceptance... they need a place where they find (inner) peace and rest. A place, a HOME, where they are accompanied by someone who makes them feel welcome, appreciated and accepted for who they really are. This is what Salesian educators can offer in our centres, schools and boarding schools. Next to that, I hope that young people get the opportunity to be really 'young' again. Many schools, sport and youth centres, social meeting places... were closed last many months because of Covid-19 restrictions. Young people need these places: to meet and interact with peers, to have educators and role models around them, to be away from home for a while when it is difficult to be there.

Bioethical Challenges

For an authentic and life-supporting behaviour of young people in Belgium

We pray for Christians facing new bioethical challenges; may they continue to defend the dignity of all human life with prayer and action.
